TRANSFORMING OUR BUSINESS MODELS

How local media companies can survive and thrive

Steve Gray

The big change

- From newspaper companies to local media companies

What is a “local media company”?

- A local media company uses all effective media to reach virtually everyone with an abundance of information they use in their lives every day.

- A local media company serves a huge number of local businesses with a full suite of media solutions, reaching a full range of audiences to bring local buyers through the door.

What’s happening to our business model?

Let’s break it down:

- AUDIENCE
- ADVERTISING
Audience -- THEN

- News = 90%+ penetration of local audience
- Advertisers pay us big bucks to reach the audience
- We make lots of money

Audience -- NOW

- Print penetrations < 25% on weekdays, < 35% on Sundays
- Digital penetration – much smaller than we think
- Smaller penetrations = smaller ad revenues
Most popular websites in Lubbock DMA ranked by visits from within DMA

Today’s mobile audience – same story

Mobile users – share of time spent per information category
The sobering conclusion:

Local news won’t get us enough local audience

• Why is that?
  • The Internet is “about me”
  • With infinite information, you go for what’s relevant to you
• Our news is in head-to-head competition with the whole Web
• Millennials rarely come to our sites (API study – “How Millennials Get News”)
• We’re winning only .3% of the time
What can we do about it?

• Do a better job with the news – break out of “routine”
• Add volumes of person-centered content that people will crave every day
• From my one-sheet, “21st-century local news”:
  • What’s going to affect ME?
  • What might be good opportunities for ME?
  • What do I need to watch out for?
  • What are other people talking/laughing about?
  • What are the cool, interesting people doing?
  • What are the knuckleheads and oddballs doing?
But let’s get real....

Double or triple our digital audience? Still not enough.

- The blunt truth: We will never lead in digital audience share, and our print share is dropping fast.
- But local businesses still need to reach the people we aren’t reaching.

How to change our audience model:

- Do all we can to expand our local audience/information franchise through new, more personal content.
- Sell advertisers into OPA (Other People’s Audiences) as well as our own.
- Sell digital marketing solutions that go direct to audiences.

Four advertising challenges we face:

1. Our “owned” media channels no longer reach enough of the local population

2. Big digital pureplays, like Google, Facebook and Autotrader, are sucking up a huge share of local digital ad dollars
Borrell’s figures:
Local digital ad spending
- $34B in 2014
- $89B in 2018
- 160% growth

Newspapers’ share
- 7.1% in 2013
- 3.3% in 2018

Borrell’s verdict:
“Digital ad sales overall are increasing faster than legacy media can sell it.”

The good news:
There’s a huge amount of revenue for those who really go after it.
Four challenges we face (cont.):

1. Our “owned” media channels no longer reach enough of the local population

2. Big digital pureplays, like Google, Facebook and Autotrader, are sucking up a huge share of local digital ad dollars

3. Our sales teams are drastically undersized to win our share of the growth – and handicapped by the need to sell print

4. Our product sets need to keep expanding fast to help local businesses connect with customers. Print and banner ads aren’t nearly enough!
See the size of the opportunity

In the nine largest Morris markets...

- Tiny market share
- Huge opportunity

160,320 businesses
6,553 active accounts

Across nine markets, our customers are only 3.9% of the available businesses
A local media company would...

1. Make growth in active accounts a top company-wide goal
2. Monitor relentlessly – daily, weekly and monthly reports sent to EVERYBODY!
3. Set goals for reps, managers, publishers and markets; build them into the comp plans
4. Track results and celebrate successes

What do I want to know today?
The 21st-century definition of local news

Local, time-sensitive, person-centered information. Such as:

What’s going to affect me?
For instance:
- Events
- Crime
- Weather
- Safety and welfare hazards
- Traffic on my routes
- New businesses near me
- Changes in key services (e.g., trash collection, cable service, fire protection, water service)

What might be good opportunities for me?
For instance:
- Things to do
- Events
- Seasonal activities
- Cool bargains
- Free stuff
- Family stuff
- New restaurants
- Big hiring opportunities

What will people be talking about?
(What do I need to know to avoid looking stupid?)
For instance:
- Funny, odd, horrible or great things that happened
- Local gossip and scandal
- Major civic squabbles and controversies
- “Gee whiz” local news (and very big non-local)
- Big sports developments affecting local favorite teams
- Anything causing people to say, "Did you hear?" or "Did you know?"
- Local buzz on social networks

What are the cool, interesting, important or smart people in our community talking about and doing?
For instance:
- What's on their Facebook pages?
- What are they tweeting about?
- What things from the lists above are getting their attention?
- What’s keeping them up at night?

What are the local knuckleheads, sociopaths and oddballs doing?
For instance:
- Crime news and criminals
- Interesting/odd police reports
- Oddities that local people are doing or involved in

What do I need to defend myself against?
For instance:
- Pending civic decisions that might affect me
- Rate hikes
- Traffic problems
- Rezoning hearings near me
- School policy changes

What discussions might I want to see or join?
For instance:
- Facebook, Google+, Twitter
- News discussion threads
- Athenstalks.com

The best way to get much of this would be the "crowd" – local people. Which calls for a new kind of reporting in which we wire ourselves into networks of local people – on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, etc. – and see what’s getting their attention. And we draw on them to help us get the information we share with our audiences.
