

Clockwise from top: Cherokee Lake, finished in 1941, was only 25 years old when the Citizen Tribune debuted. Morristown's James "Little Man" Stewart dives for a touchdown in this Carol Henderson photo. Bobbie Ball, who joined the Tribune in 1974, is the longest tenured Tribune employee other publisher R. Jack Fishman. Snow falls on a house in the Morristown historic district than founding in this Chuck Hale photo. The 1987 National Championship team from the Little League World Series.

Tribune celebrates five decades

From Staff Reports

t was 50 years ago today, on Sept. 6, 1966, after a buildup of several months, the Citizen Tribune was born.

The paper was created to serve the eight-county Lakeway Region, providing news coverage on a wider basis and helping the paper's advertisers reach a wider audience.

Through the ensuing demented the Region's growth, from its development as a furniture and textile manufacturing mecca to its rebirth as a diverse manufacturing hub and budding tourism destination.

The Tribune has been there to document the lives of the people of the Lakeway Region as well as their extraordinary achievements.

Inside today's commemorative edition, you'll find six sec-cades, the Tribune has docu- tions, one for each of the five the newspaper business is a decades the Tribune has served the Lakeway Region as well as an overview section.

> came to be, as well as how it came to be what it is today.

> Also inside are the stories of each decade in the life of the Lakeway Region.

After all, as Citizen Tribune founding publisher R. Jack Fishman has often said, people business.

"It has been our honor and privilege to tell the stories of Inside today's edition are the people of the Lakeway the stories of how the Tribune Region for the last 50 years," Fishman said. "And today we're happy to celebrate this auspicious anniversary, but more than that we celebrate the Lakeway Region, which it has been our blessing to serve.

"Thank you for these 50 wonderful years."

MORE 50TH! SEE PICTURES, CLIPPINGS, PAGES AND MORE THAT DIDN'T MAKE THE PRINT EDITION

Body of Norris Lake boater recovered

From Contributed Reports

The Tennessee Wildlife Resource Agency has found the body of a Norris Lake boater who went missing in a cove near Sugar Camp Lane in Maynardville on Monday.

On Monday at 6:40 p.m., rescue crews recovered the victim's body in about 46 feet of water.

The 71-year-old man from recovered by use of the ROV. Anderson County went missing around noon after jumping into the lake from an anchored pontoon boat.

Witnesses onboard the boat say that the victim went under the water and never resurfaced.

Rescue crews from Union County and Knoxville joined TWRA in the search for the victim who was located by way of a Remote Operated Vehicle.

TWRA officers located the victim's body and divers from the Knoxville Rescue Squad made the recovery. Since acquiring the unit a few years ago, approximately 27 boating incident victims have been TWRA Union County Wildlife Officer Rick Roberts is the lead investigator for TWRA and coordinated an autopsy request with medical examiner Dr. Mark Holland.

The victim's identity will be released Tuesday and the incident remains under investigation.

Train hits pedestrian

John Gullion/Citizen Tribune

A Norfolk-Southern train rests on the track Sunday morning near the intersection with James Street after striking a pedestrian. According to Morristown Police, a man, apparently intentionally, stepped in front of the train near the closed intersection with Daisy Street, roughly behind Sherwood Commons. The man was flown to the University of Tennessee Medical Center.

