Case Study: Leveraging Cross Device Opportunities Via Identity Resolution

As Hurricane Irma left a path of destruction throughout Florida last fall, many homeowners faced significant challenges and damage to their homes.

Ged Attorneys, LLP, a local legal firm specializing in insurance claims with no active advertising in the marketplace, wanted to get messaging out to the right target consumer in Collier, Lee, and Monroe counties immediately.

Data-Dynamix identified 116,000 deterministically graphed Homeowners with a Mortgage and a Home Value $200,000+ within the three targeted south Florida counties.

A 3-week mobile-centric campaign delivered to targeted Mobile Device IDs and/or IP Addresses using four ad sizes including site retargeting.

Ged Lawyers, LLP are expert in dealing with FEMA and insurance companies – they wanted to let targeted homeowners know that they were there to help capture all necessary monies for the repair of their damaged property.

Objective Results: This IP/Mobile ID campaign showed significant activity from mobile devices (75% of delivered impressions).

- Drove 377 new targeted consumers (0.15% CTR vs. industry average of 0.04%) to the end client's website
- Plus, 32 recorded view-throughs to the end client's website

Subjective Results: The end client is “happy being too busy to keep up”!

Continued Success: Our media partner has worked this tactic into their own marketing plan and continues to use it with a consistently high CTR of 0.3% and good lead generation for themselves since the 3rd week of October 2017.
