A unique opportunity to make an impact across a national footprint

More than 720 newspapers from across the country, totaling more than 6,000,000 in distribution, have united to contribute to a new national print advertising network launched by America’s Newspapers. This program creates a great opportunity for advertisers to reach a premium audience at an attractive CPM rate.

Intersect Media has been selected as the agency to manage the program. Jim Fogler, Intersect Media’s president and CEO, said: “I am excited to hear that, based on our proven success and experience, Intersect Media has been selected as America’s Newspapers’ agency of choice to help them secure national advertising sales and execute their print campaigns in newspapers throughout the U.S. and Canada. This winning partnership aligns our shared priority to ensure our newspaper industry continues to thrive – on behalf of our customers and clients!”

Any member of America’s Newspapers with a national sales force has the opportunity to sell these two quarter-page ads, helping to support America’s Newspapers and earning a commission as well. “We are thrilled at the response of so many members who are supporting this program and hope they will also consider playing a role in the sales process. This is a great opportunity to demonstrate the power of print advertising on a national footprint, and I feel confident that the advertiser will see good results,” said Dean Ridings, America’s Newspapers CEO.

For advertisers, this is an exceptional opportunity to reach more than 6 million dedicated readers who are engaged with their local newspaper and respond to advertising. Simply select a publication date and America’s Newspapers and our partners will take care of the work of placing the ads across the entire network.
